

Continuing to Take on New Challenges

I am Yasuhiro Ohmura, I assumed the roles of Representative Director and President, CEO in April, 2026. Taking on this significant role at a company with over a century of history, I deeply feel the weight of this responsibility.

Since its founding in 1917, Nikon has sought the limitless potential of light, continuously providing new value. To enhance Nikon's corporate value, our new Medium-Term Management Plan (April 2026 to March 2031) aims to balance recovering short-term business performance with investing for long-term growth and taking on new challenges to realize our Vision 2030 of becoming "a key technology solutions company in a global society where humans and machines co-create seamlessly."

To do so, we will focus on our financial discipline and balance sheet, generate capacity for growth investments, clearly define our priorities, and allocate resources strategically while remaining mindful of appropriate time horizons.

Furthermore, we will continuously challenge ourselves to: 1) meet and exceed customer needs and aspirations, 2) improve cost efficiency and the speed at which we deliver our products, and 3) advance the precision and resilience of our products.

Together with our 20,000 employees worldwide, we will continue to take on every challenge to realize our Vision 2030 of becoming "a key technology solutions company in a global society where humans and machines co-create seamlessly."
